

Happy Easter 2022

Today, more than ever, the world needs to see people living the Gospel. Each one of us is called to be at the service of every sister and brother, especially those whom our society calls the least, those excluded.

So, my wish for each one is that these days which precede Easter, a time of rebirth and resurrection, may be above all a strong call to aim for holiness, personally and all together.

- to go deep within ourselves and rediscover the joy and courage of our first call;
- to take up again our journey following Jesus;
- to be light, leaven and salt in our environments;
- to spread God's love to many people everywhere.

The next few days will be solemn moments for many of us. Most Christians will celebrate Easter on 17th April, whereas the Orthodox and Eastern Orthodox Christians will celebrate it on 24th April.

I invoke God's blessing on our Jewish brothers and sisters as they celebrate the Feast of Pesah these days.

I wish you all an Easter of rebirth by loving everyone, taking on a commitment, both personally and together, to build a stable and lasting peace in every part of the world.

With heartfelt love

Margaret Karram
